Dear Colleague,

I am writing in behalf of Martin Miguel to support his candidacy for the PhD candidate at the Institute for Logic, Language and Computation. Martin has been doing his final thesis for the last 8 months, in the Computer Science Department, Universidad de Buenos Aires under my supervision.

I became acquainted with Martin almost one year ago, when he presented himself asking for thesis supervision. He showed a great enthusiasm in researching about music perception and understanding different aspects of music cognition. From the very first moment, he showed an extremely open mind with great motivation with interdisciplinary work. Martin's first steps as a student were exceptional because he managed to start, develop and consolidate on his own a completely new theme, something which is completely unusual and which only the top 1% of students with a tremendously determined drive can achieve.

Now, we are finishing his project which I have no doubt will be published in a very prestigious research journal.

Hence, I state that Martin Miguel will graduate before july 2015, and I recommend him as an ideal candidate for the PhD position.
